

A Directory of Natural Resource Specialists
for Educators

Provided to you by: Grande Ronde Model Watershed, 1114 “J” Avenue, La Grande, OR 97850 (541) 663-0570.

Revised 2007

Introduction

This booklet is a compilation of natural resource specialists in Baker, Union and Wallowa counties who may be willing to participate in educational projects in Northeast Oregon. When making contact with any of these individuals, please appreciate and respect the fact that they may be heavily involved in their professional work, and may not be immediately available to work on your project.

This booklet has been designed to help facilitate educators search for natural resource specialists interested in participating in school education projects. A chart has been created to simplify the directory to categories and specialists that fall within those categories. The categories have been listed across the top of the chart and each person and their respective agency is listed along the left side of the chart. The chart was designed to be read like a bar chart. The page number listed next to the person's name is the page which lists the contact person's agency, specialties, address, work phone number and email. The categories have been simplified; therefore, educators should reference similar categories and read exactly what each person's specialties are. The second half of the directory alphabetically lists governmental and non-governmental agencies or groups that may be able to provide you with names of willing personnel with backgrounds in natural history, nature studies, local history, anthropology and sciences. These agencies may also be able to provide educational materials.

Grande Ronde Model Watershed
Educational Outreach Hands-On Activities
(March 2007)

Activities can be checked out to use in the classroom.

EnviroScape Models: Each model comes with instructional booklets and some with videos:

Non-Point Source Model: This model tracks pollution from non-point sources, including residential areas, forestry areas, transportation, recreation, agriculture and construction, and from industry as a point source.

Groundwater Component Kit: This model can be used with any of the other models since it fits in the bottom of the other models. This provides basic demonstrations on how groundwater works, how we use groundwater, how we pollute groundwater and how we can prevent and cleanup groundwater contamination.

Wetlands Model: This model demonstrates the basic functions and values of inland and coastal wetland areas; how human factors affect wetlands; learn to recognize different types of wetlands; understand what activities negatively affect wetlands; learn what activities can help to conserve wetlands; and see how constructed wetlands can help us better manage what we do on the land. This model can also demonstrate point and non-point source pollution.

Riparian Kit: This kit needs to be used with one of the models. This will address the benefits and values of riparian buffers—areas including trees and other vegetation adjacent to the banks of streams, rivers and lakes. The kit’s guide explores the positive effects of good riparian buffers as well as activities that contribute to poor riparian buffer zones.

Hazardous Waste Model: This model shows: potential sources of pollution; proper use and disposal options for hazardous materials; prevention practices to keep hazardous materials from adversely affecting the environment; methods used to clean up hazardous waste sites, discharges and spills; and environmental and health risks associated with contamination.
